Client: G1 Group
Status: Completed 2009
Value: £2m

This new build Bar / Restaurant complex for the G1 Group comprises three adjoining buildings, one timber clad and the other two in traditional Scottish white harling.

The fragmentation of the buildings both breaks down the scale of the development and encloses outside 'rooms'. Site position takes advantage of views and southerly aspect and the approach and routes through interior and exterior spaces are carefully staged. The sudden opening of views, flooding of light and connection between spaces is designed to provide drama and a sense of place.

Using form, material palette, scale and articulation we combined Scottish vernacular with a modern sensibility to achieve a bespoke, site responsive solution for a building type which can often be stale and generic.
